Concordia wins 25th Annual Theresa Humes Tournament Providence, Ottawa and McGill all winners

The Concordia Stingers captured the Theresa Humes Tournament championship with a 4-0 win over les Patriotes de St. Laurent. Tracey Robinson with two goals, Kathy Morrison and Laurie Cartman all scored for the Stingers in the first 7:00 minutes of the first period to pace Concordia to its first win in the tournament since 1975. Marie-Claude Roy, a member of Canada's National Team, recorded the shutout by turning aside 27 shots. Robinson captured the Player of the Game award.

In the first game of the day, the McGill Martlets defeated les Patriotes de l'Université de Québec à Trois-Rivières 5-4 thanks to Heidi Bloomfield's power play marker at 11:36 of third period. Bloomfield, who was chosen as the Player of the Game, had two goals and two assists for the game. Other scorers for the Martlets were Barbara Benson with a pair and Alyson Fournier. Edith Poissant, Caroline Gelinas, Joséé Bedard and Edith Palardey replied for UQTR. With the win, the Martlets clinched seventh place in the tournament.

The Ottawa Patriots got two goals from Andrea Blakeley in a 2:39 span in the second period to defeat the Mississauga Chiefs 6-2 and capture fifth place in the tournament. Afolake Aiyede, Carol Clayton, Sandy Stimpson and Leanne Wright also scored for the Patriots while Deb Gillis and Kim Downard replied for the Chiefs. It was a rough game which featured 23 minor penalties, 15 of which were taken by Mississauga. Blakeley was named the Player of the Game.

In the Providence-St. Lawrence matchup, Cammi Granato lived up to her pre-tournament billing as one of the most dominant players. Granato scored three goals, including the game winner to pace the Lady Friars to a 6-3 win and third place in the tournament. Lynn Manning added a pair and Chris Bailey also scored for Providence. Michele Amidon with a pair and Michele Seltzer replied for the Saints. This was a close game, with the Lady Friars holding a 3-2 advantage after two periods. But they took their play to another level in the third period of this one.
